Merger Integration Planning Update

The below message is being distributed to your employees tomorrow morning and may generate questions regarding impacts on individuals or teams. Senior leaders will host calls or meetings soon to discuss the next phase of integration planning and how it may affect their organizations, such as if/which employees will be providing additional support to the integration planning teams; if/how the enterprise-wide resource evaluation will impact projects or programs currently underway or planned for later this year or 2012; and how the PeopleSoft ERP platform will be integrated over time into current work environments. Questions related to our rebuttal filing with the Illinois Commerce Commission (ICC) may also arise.

These talking points are designed to help you address immediate employee questions as a result of today's update:

Integration Planning

- The integration teams are moving into the next phase of work, which involves developing business plans and crafting detailed post-merger operating model designs in support of the recommendations recently presented to the Transition Committee.
- As part of the transition to the next phase, some employees may be required to become more directly involved in integration planning, and other employees may transition off the integration planning teams in order to ensure we continue to meet the demands of the day-to-day business.
- Additionally, to ensure resources are maximized enterprise-wide, some projects or programs may be delayed or cancelled to ensure adequate resources are available to plan for and execute a successful integration.
- This rebalancing of resources throughout the enterprise should not be interpreted as future state of post-merger organizational structure. This effort is intended only to ensure adequate resources are made available to accomplish two very important objectives: (1) meet the daily demands of the business while also advancing initiatives important to business growth and (2) plan for and execute a successful integration.
- Senior leaders will provide more information about which employees (if any) and which projects (if any) may be affected within their respective organizations in the next two weeks.

Rebuttal Testimony with ICC

- Today we filed rebuttal to last month's testimony of ICC Staff and other intervenors. We have accepted many of Staff's recommendations (either as is or with slight modifications) and believe we have reduced the number of issues.

- Also, we provided information to refute some of the staff's and other intervenors' assertions, particularly those centered on our ability to maintain safe service levels. Employees can be confident we will vigorously defend our hard-earned and well-respected safety culture.
- We will continue to work through the regulatory process to satisfactorily resolve the ICC's concerns in order to allow for a successful completion to the proposed AGL Resources – Nicor transaction.

Merger Integration Planning Update

Together with my colleagues on the merger Transition Committee, I am pleased to update you on the progress of the integration teams. As you know, the integration teams were formed to develop plans that will most successfully join AGL Resources and Nicor after the anticipated close of the transaction. Team members have worked diligently to assess the current state of both organizations and have developed recommended operating models for the combined company expected to meet integration goals. Over the past few weeks, the integration teams presented their recommendations to the Transition Committee, and while it is premature to share details of those discussions, I can assure you the Committee was impressed by the strategic thought and expertise evident in the recommendations.

The integration teams will meet in Atlanta on June 7th to kick off the next phase of integration planning. In this phase, the integration teams will use the information presented to and feedback from the Transition Committee to build business plans that support their recommendations and craft a detailed design of the post-merger operating model for their respective business units and functional areas. With periodic review by the Transition Committee, the teams also will develop plans for successful implementation of the post-merger operating model. Given the nature of the work to be done in this phase, various integration teams will undergo personnel changes. Some teams will expand to include more subject matter expertise, and other team members will transition out of the planning process to ensure we continue to meet the demands of the business and deliver safe, reliable service to our customers.

We understand that incorporating additional people into the integration planning process has the potential to stretch resources on other projects and initiatives throughout the company, and we are considering those impacts carefully. This effort is intended only to ensure adequate resources are made available to accomplish two critical business objectives: (1) meet the day-to-day demands of all of our businesses while also advancing initiatives important to business growth and (2) plan for and execute a successful integration. It is important that any rebalancing of resources to satisfy these objectives not be misinterpreted as future state of post-merger organizational structure.

Also, the Transition Committee recently confirmed the selection of PeopleSoft as the common financial system, or enterprise resource platform (ERP), for the proposed combined company. The company's ERP provides a critical foundation for the many systems we use to run our business. By making this selection now, the committee can ensure business unit and functional area operating models are designed for scalability and growth across a common platform, even though a post-close transition to PeopleSoft is a multi-year endeavor.

Finally, yesterday AGL Resources and Nicor filed a rebuttal to last month's testimony by ICC Staff and other intervenors related to our proposed merger. We accepted the staff's position in many instances, and believe we have significantly reduced the number of issues. Going forward, we will continue to work through the regulatory process with the goal of obtaining merger approval in the second half of this year.

You'll be hearing more on these developments from your departmental leadership in the next few weeks. In the meantime, I encourage you to visit the Merger Communications page on Planet or send any questions or thoughts to merger@aglresources.com.

Thank you for your continued support of your colleagues serving on the integration teams, and warmest wishes for a safe and relaxing holiday weekend with family and friends.

Drew Evans
Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer
Chair, Merger Transition Committee
