Valspar Transaction Announcement

Employee FAQs

What is the rationale for this transaction?

This is a transformative transaction and a milestone in Sherwin-Williams history.

Sherwin-Williams and Valspar have highly complementary product offerings, when combined will firmly establish Sherwin-Williams as a premier global paints and coatings provider.

The combination will enable us to provide customers with a broader portfolio of brands and technologies, including capabilities in the packaging and coil segments.

The transaction will also expand our global footprint with scale and enable a platform for growth across China, Australia and New Zealand, as well as enhance our R&D capabilities.

We expect this broadened product range, reach, and development capability will deliver increased value to all of our customers, partners and shareholders.

What does this mean for employees of Sherwin-Williams and Valspar?

We intend to build a dynamic organization that brings together two world-class companies and offers greater opportunities for employees as part of a premier global paints and coatings provider.

Will there be any headcount reductions?

This combination is about future growth – employee opportunities will be created by a combined company with strong growth prospects that is better able to serve customers.

The vast majority of employees will be unaffected by the transaction. We will bring together a team from both companies to ensure a smooth integration.

What should we be telling our customers? Why is this good for them?

You should tell them that we are very excited about this transaction and believe our customers will benefit significantly from access to an expanded product portfolio across a wider geography. The combination will also enhance our technology and innovation capabilities.

Customers should also know that until the transaction closes in early 2017, it's business as usual – both Sherwin-Williams and Valspar will continue to operate as separate companies, and customers' points of contacts will remain the same.

And, of course, we will continue to provide the same level of high-quality products and outstanding service.

What are the next steps in the process?

The transaction is expected to close in early 2017 following regulatory and other required approvals. Until then, it is business as usual, and both Sherwin-Williams and Valspar will continue to operate as separate companies.

What should employees be doing now?

We encourage all Sherwin-Williams employees to remain focused on delivering the highest quality of products and outstanding service our customers have come to expect.

What should I say to my Valspar counterparts?

As competitors, you should not be interacting with them. Until the transaction closes, we remain totally separate companies.

Who should I contact if I have additional questions? Where can I find more information about the transaction?

Please reach out to your division or group leadership team with any questions.

Additional information about the transaction has been posted on mysherwin.com and sherwin-williams.com.

We will keep you informed as we move toward completing this transaction and provide updates on integration details.
