On November 20, 2017, The New York Times Company (the Company) sent a notice required by Rule 104 of the Securities and Exchange Commission's Regulation BTR (the Notice) to its directors and executive officers informing them of upcoming restrictions on the trading of Company Class A common stock (the Common Stock) due to a planned blackout period related to The New York Times Companies Supplemental Retirement and Investment Plan (the 401(k) plan).

The blackout period is required to facilitate the elimination of The New York Times Company Stock Fund (the Company Stock Fund) as an investment option under the 401(k) plan, and the liquidation of shares of Common Stock currently held in the Company Stock Fund. The blackout period will begin on December 20, 2017, at 4:00 p.m., and is expected to end no later than the week ending December 30, 2017. During the blackout period, participants in the 401(k) plan will be unable to direct or diversify investments in the Company Stock Fund and/or take certain withdrawals, loans or distributions from the portion of the participant's account invested in the Company Stock Fund.

As described in the Notice, during the blackout period, the Company's directors and executive officers will be prohibited from, directly or indirectly, purchasing, selling or otherwise acquiring or transferring any equity security of the Company acquired in connection with their service or employment as a director or executive officer, subject to limited exceptions. The term equity security includes, without limitation, Common Stock, options and other derivatives.

During the blackout period, and for a period of two years after the end date thereof, a security holder or other interested person may obtain, without charge, information regarding the blackout period, including the actual beginning and end dates of the blackout period, by contacting Ellen C. Shultz, Executive Vice President, Talent and Inclusion, or Diane Brayton, Executive Vice President, General Counsel and Secretary. Each can be reached at (212) 556-1234 or by mail at The New York Times Company, 620 Eighth Avenue, New York, New York 10018.
