On April 20, 2018, the following communication was sent to certain employees of The E.W. Scripps Company (“Scripps”) and the same or substantially similar communications may in the future be sent to Scripps employees from time to time:

Scripps leaders and employee shareholders:

As you know, one of Scripps’ largest shareholders has nominated three people to run against our proposed nominees for our board of directors. You may have received materials in the mail from this firm, GAMCO, asking for your vote. We hope you will support Scripps by sending in your WHITE voting card or by voting online for the company slate of directors: Lauren R. Fine, Roger L. Ogden and Kim Williams. (Please refer to these instructions we sent last month on how to vote.)

When I became CEO in August, your leadership team put in place a strategy, backed by our board, that is delivering tangible results toward improving the company’s performance in order to best position us for the future. This plan is focused on new operating philosophies across our businesses that promote growth. At the same time, we have refined our local media acquisitions strategy to take advantage of new federal ownership rules. And we are investing in our fast-growing national media brands (the Katz networks, Newsy and Midroll) to fully capture their potential over the long term.

We have gained significant momentum since implementing our strategy and are beginning to see the results. In fact, we continue to receive positive reviews of our plan from the investment analyst community.

For the past 140 years, Scripps has been a financially sound company rooted in journalism. We have a mission to serve our audiences and advertisers with quality local and national news, information and entertainment. Having GAMCO’s nominees on our board would distract us both from our performance improvement plan and from this mission in which we all believe.

Scripps has a strong plan. We hope you will support us as we continue to execute it.

The vote will be counted at the Scripps Annual Shareholder Meeting on Thursday, May 10. If you have any questions, please reach out. For questions about voting, you can contact our proxy solicitor, MacKenzie Partners, at 800-322-2885 or at proxy@mackenziepartners.com.
