PRESS RELEASE

ARCADIS REPORTS RESULTS SECOND QUARTER 2003

ARNHEM, The Netherlands, August 12, 2003 ARCADIS (Nasdaq: ARCAF; Euronext: ARCAD), the international consulting and engineering company, reported net income from operations in the second quarter of 2003 of € 5.7 million, 16% lower than in the same period last year. Of this decline, half can be attributed to exchange rate declines in U.S., Brazilian and Chilean currencies. Excluding currency effects, net income from operations declined 8%. Despite currency effects, gross revenues remained solid with only 2% decline. In the first half of 2003 net income from operations declined by 10%, of which 9% is attributable to currency-effects. With a decline of 1% gross revenues remained almost level versus a year ago.

ARCADIS' results reflect the deteriorated market conditions in the Netherlands which, combined with higher pension charges, resulted in pressure on margins. Measures have been taken to adjust capacity in the Netherlands and to intensify the cost cutting programs already in progress. This will result in a staff reduction of around 275 employees in the Netherlands this year, of which nearly 100 have already been achieved through attrition and cancellation of temporary contracts.

ARCADIS made good progress with the strategic expansion of activities. In the second quarter, a 75% interest was acquired in the German company Homola (gross revenues € 10 million, 125 employees), which specializes in project- and program management. In mid-June, the Company announced the acquisition of Finkbeiner, Pettis & Strout in the United States. After the second quarter, two additional American acquisitions were announced: Lawson, Noble & Webb and Reese Macon. These three U.S. acquisitions, with combined revenues of US$ 42 million and 435 employees, considerably improve the Company's position in the U.S. infrastructure market. In mid-July, the Company signed a contract with Philips Electronics Nederland BV for the outsourcing of their facility management to a joint venture between ARCADIS and English company Aquamen. The four year contract includes facility management for 650,000 square meters of floor space.

Commenting on these developments, ARCADIS CEO Harrie Noy said: "In the Netherlands, the considerable amount of attention for tendering procedures and the reassessment of Dutch government policy, combined with the insecure economic outlook, exerted negative pressure on investment volumes. In addition, discussions in the Netherlands on private property taxation caused new project delays, and also had a negative effect on our quarterly results. The measures we have taken are aimed at improving margins. We are pleased that despite a lack of economic recovery, results in other European countries and the United States were better than last year, mainly as a result of growth in infrastructure and environment. With the acquisitions we have completed we have strengthened our position in existing home markets. The facility management contract with Philips is an important breakthrough in a potential growth market. These expansions create new opportunities for future growth."

Analysis

In the second quarter of 2003, gross revenues declined slightly by 2%. Excluding currency-effects gross revenues grew 6%. Of this increase 9% came from acquisitions, leaving an organic decline of 3%, which was predominantly attributable to developments in the Netherlands and to Brazil, where a change in government at the end of last year is causing delays in new project assignments. In Europe, particularly Belgium and England contributed to growth, while organic growth in the United States was also good.

The decline in operating income had three causes: the deteriorated market circumstances in the Netherlands, the lower order intake in Brazil and a non-recurring book gain in the second quarter 2002 resulting from the sale of some assets in the United States. The decline in Brazil was almost compensated for by income from energy projects which were completed in 2002 and in which ARCADIS holds a minority interest via its Brazilian subsidiary. If adjusted for the non-recurring book gain and the contribution from the energy projects, the organic decline in operating income was 11%.

The contribution from the Brazilian energy projects is visible in the strong increase in income from non-consolidated companies. Combined with a lower tax rate, this leads to net income from operations which is considerably better than operating income. Organically, net income from operations declined 4%.

In the first half of 2003, gross revenues remained almost level with a decline of only 1%. An increase of 9% resulting from acquisitions was offset by a decline caused by currency effects of the same magnitude, resulting in an organic decline of 1%. Factors affecting ARCADIS' results for the 2003 first half are comparable to those in the second quarter.

Market developments

Any numbers in the following section apply to the developments in the first half of 2003 in comparison with the same period last year, unless otherwise mentioned.

Infrastructure: Growth in this market of 7% was mainly due to acquisitions, with organic growth limited to 1% as a result of the developments in the Netherlands and Brazil. In Belgium and Spain, organic growth remained at a high level, while in Germany organic growth was achieved through work on the high speed railway line between the towns of Ebenfeld and Erfurt, as well as projects related to last year's floods. In France, the infrastructure market also developed favorably. Although budgets of individual states are under pressure in the U.S., the effect thereof was less than expected and some organic growth was achieved.

Environment: With organic growth of 5%, environment was the most important growth segment for ARCADIS. The bulk of the growth came from the United States. The proprietary GRIP approach is a success in the private as well as the Federal market. In addition, new facility compliance services were introduced. Europe also experienced growth in almost all countries. In France and Brazil, where activities were expanded through acquisitions, the Multinational Client program is yielding rapid synergy results.

Buildings: The downward economic cycle in Europe caused an organic decline in building market activities, where the effects of declining investments in the real estate market were particularly noticeable in Spain and the Netherlands. A positive indicator was the emerging recovery in the United States, where for the third consecutive quarter gross revenues grew as a result of private sector investments. In all, an organic decline of 8% resulted.

Communications: The activities in this segment declined by 21%, reflecting the contribution of two factors: the further decline in telecom activities, particularly in the United States, and delays in the assignment of real estate valuation projects in the Netherlands. Growth continued in geographical information systems (GIS), particularly through the usage of new technologies in infrastructure projects.

Outlook

Edgar Filing: ARCADIS N V - Form 6-K

The weak economy exerts negative pressure on the investment climate. In the Netherlands, the focus on government budgets and tendering procedures continues to hamper public investment. Growth opportunities exist where it comes to much needed investments in improvement of rail infrastructure. The Company's involvement in large projects in Belgium, Spain, France and Germany offers growth opportunities. ARCADIS' strong position in the environmental market provides a solid basis for further growth in the United States and in less developed environmental markets such as France, Belgium, Brazil and the Czech Republic. If the economic recovery is maintained in the United States in the second half of 2003, a further positive effect on private sector building investment is likely. In Europe, no recovery in the buildings market is foreseen this year. The telecom market also fails to show signs of recovery. After initial delays in real estate valuations, a new round of valuations has now started.

CEO Noy concluded: "The long term outlook for ARCADIS is favorable, but current economic reality limits organic growth. Despite this, we have maintained results at a good level with the exception of the Netherlands. Improvement of the Dutch situation through implementation of the measures which were taken has a high priority. The completed acquisitions are expected to positively influence results in the second half of 2003, although part of this will be offset by currency effects. In all, we expect that for 2003, barring unforeseen circumstances, net income from operations will decline by 10 to 15%, of which 5 to 6% is caused by currency impacts. In addition, we continue to work on further expansion of activities through acquisitions, aiming at future growth opportunities and an improvement of our position in the value chain."

ARCADIS is a leading, global, knowledge-driven service provider, active in the fields of infrastructure, buildings, environment and communications.
