Letter from the President

Dear Shareholder:

The US economy continued to expand during the six-month reporting period ended July 31, 2017, although the overall pace was rather modest. Meanwhile, there were indications that economic activity overseas was improving. Against this backdrop, both US and international equities generated strong results. Elsewhere, the US bond market posted a modest return during the reporting period.

For the six-month reporting period ended July 31, 2017

; AllianzGI Diversified Income & Convertible Fund returned 8.60% on net asset value ($\,$ NAV $\,$) and 16.31% on market price.

Thomas J. Fuccillo

; AllianzGI Equity & Convertible Income Fund returned 6.50% on NAV and 9.68% on market price.

President & Chief Executive Officer

; AllianzGI NFJ Dividend, Interest & Premium Strategy Fund returned 3.22% on NAV and 7.15% on market price.

During the six months ended July 31, 2017, the Russell 3000 Index, a broad measure of US stock market performance, gained 8.94%; the Russell 1000 Value Index, a measure of large-cap value-style stocks, rose 5.30%; and the Russell 1000 Growth Index, a measure of growth style stocks, gained 13.21%. Convertible securities, as reflected by the BofA Merrill Lynch All Convertibles Index, returned 7.21%.

Turning to the US economy, gross domestic product (GDP), the value of goods and services produced in the country, the broadest measure of economic activity and a principal indicator of economic performance, expanded at a 1.8% annual pace during the fourth quarter of 2016. GDP then moderated to a 1.2% annual pace during the first quarter of 2017. The Commerce Department s estimate for the second quarter of 2017 showed that GDP released after the reporting period had ended grew at an annual pace of 3.0%.

The US Federal Reserve (the Fed) raised interest rates on two separate occasions during the reporting period: in March 2017 and June 2017. In both cases, the Fed s movements were well telegraphed. With the rate hike in June, the federal funds rate moved to a range between 1.00% and 1.25%. In the statement following the July meeting, the Fed indicated that it planned to begin reducing its balance sheet, saying The Committee expects to begin implementing its balance sheet normalization program relatively soon, provided that the economy evolves broadly as anticipated.

Outlook

Looking ahead, we believe investors should expect muted growth as the US enters the later portion of an Receive this report economic cycle, Japan is struggling with its aging population and Europe is suffering from the electronically and eliminate uncertainties related to Great Britain s anticipated exit from the European Union (Brexit). In our view, the paper mailings. US and European Union should ultimately avoid recessions, but remain mired in a relatively weak economic expansion. We expect the Fed to continue modestly increasing rates in 2017, prompting central banks in emerging markets to lower their rates as inflation falls. Elsewhere, we expect the European Central Bank and Bank of Japan to maintain their accommodative monetary policies. In our view, we have passed peak global liquidity, as central banks have pushed past negative interest rate policies to begin supporting government spending.

The tides of deregulation continued shifting in 2016, and nationalism and populism gained ground. Politics should remain a key investment consideration given the results from the last U.S. Presidential election and key elections in Europe, including the Netherlands, France and Germany. We also believe that monetary policy will become more political. As to where governments will spend the money their central banks print, we believe domestic infrastructure and defense spending will be the focus of many countries in the coming years.

Against this backdrop, we believe markets are increasingly susceptible to volatility as politics, geopolitics, divergent monetary policies and internal market structures all converge and evolve. We believe that navigating this sea of uncertainty requires a clear direction and an active management approach, with investors staying agile in their asset allocations, confident in their processes and thorough in their research.

On behalf of Allianz Global Investors U.S. LLC, thank you for investing with us. We encourage you to consult with your financial advisor and to visit our website, us.allianzgi.com, for additional information. We remain dedicated to serving your investment needs.

Sincerely,

Thomas J. Fuccillo

AllianzGI Diversified Income & Convertible Fund

For the period of February 1, 2017 through July 31, 2017, as provided by Doug Forsyth, CFA, Portfolio Manager.

For the six-month period ended July 31, 2017, the AllianzGI Diversified Income & Convertible Fund (the Fund) returned 8.60% on net asset value (NAV) and 16.31% on market price.

During the reporting period, the Russell 1000 Growth Index, a measure of growth style stocks, advanced 13.21%; and convertible securities, as reflected by the BofA Merrill Lynch All Convertibles Index, returned 7.21%.

Market Environment

The performance for the convertible, high yield and large cap equity markets was higher over the trailing six months.

Several factors influenced the three asset classes throughout the reporting period, including corporate fundamentals, economic indicators, moves made by the US Federal Reserve (the Fed), the new US administration s pro-growth agenda and sustained investors appetite for risk assets.

During the reporting period US companies continued to exhibit improving fundamentals. For example, in the first quarter of 2017 operating results for most US companies met or exceeded expectations while credit metrics showed further improvement, continuing a trend from the fourth quarter of 2016. As an additional example, the first quarter of 2017 was the first time since 2011 where US companies saw double-digit year-over-year earnings growth, on average for the S&P 500 Index. In addition, according to Bank of America Merrill Lynch, net leverage continued to tick lower and interest coverage continued to rise higher, on average for the S&P 500 Index.

Certain economic statistics were positive and factored into the market s strength. In May 2017, the unemployment rate fell to its lowest level since 2001 and private payroll figures were healthy. Housing prices continued their upward trend. Consumer and small business confidence levels came off their recent highs, but remained at bullish levels. Overall, the trend in economic data reinforced the favorable credit conditions for convertible bonds, high yield bonds and equities.

As anticipated, the Fed raised interest rates twice during the reporting period, pushing the federal funds rate to a range of 1.00% to 1.25%. The convertible market responded positively to the Fed s rate decision and commentary. Near-term rate hike projections from the Fed remain unchanged, with one more expected this year and three expected in 2018. Additionally, the Fed noted that the process of balance sheet reduction is expected to begin later this year, reflecting their confidence in the US economy. Outside of the US, global central banks throughout Europe and Asia maintained aggressive measures to stimulate their respective economies.

The three assets classes also benefited from a persistent appetite among investors for risk assets, which in part, appeared to be centered on the continued optimism surrounding President Trump s policies and pro-growth agenda. Additionally, a weaker dollar and favorable supply/demand dynamics helped lift select base metal and crude oil prices, which supported commodity-related issuers.

The volatility environment remained subdued over the reporting period. The Chicago Board Options Exchange Volatility Index (VIX) started the period in the low double-digits and was range bound between 10.5 and 13.0 throughout February 2017 and March 2017, spiked to a high of 16.0 in mid-April 2017, and reached a new record low of below 9.0 in mid-July 2017. The index started the period at 11.8 and ended the period at 10.3.

Portfolio Specifics

The Fund provided consistent income and generated a positive total return over the reporting period.

In the equity sleeve, the materials, real estate and health care sectors helped relative performance. Conversely, the information technology, energy and consumer staples sectors hindered relative performance.

In the convertible sleeve, sectors that contributed positively to relative performance were information technology, consumer discretionary and transportation. On the other hand, energy, media and utilities pressured relative performance.

In the high yield sleeve, industries that aided relative performance were health care, chemicals and theatres & entertainment. In contrast, the energy, telecommunications and utilities industries hampered relative performance.

Regarding the covered call strategy, many option positions expired below strike and the portfolio was able to retain the set premiums. With depressed implied volatility levels, fewer equities were subject to written call options during the reporting period than in prior periods.

Outlook

US equity markets continue to record new all-time highs, volatility is near all-time lows, and interest rates are trending higher on an improving economic outlook in our view. Historically, these factors have been positive indicators for both economic and corporate earnings growth and supportive of investments in risk assets.

From a fundamental standpoint, as well as the observed condition of the economy, high yield defaults in 2017 and 2018 are expected to remain below their long-term historical average in our view. This stage of the market cycle can be compared to the mid-1990s and mid-2000s, when market environments exhibited economic stability, low defaults and healthy balance sheets.

Stress in select industries of the market has waned, and overall, we believe balance sheets, leverage ratios and interest-coverage ratios continue to support an investment in these asset classes.

The US economy is expected to expand at a moderate pace for the remainder of 2017, in our view. The stock market s strength and the US Treasury yield curve appear to confirm this expectation. Moreover, any combination of positive tax reform, decreased regulation, and increased fiscal spending could provide upside to growth expectations.

After bottoming in the second quarter of 2016, corporate profits have significantly improved through the first quarter of 2017. Based on bottom-up estimates, we believe they are poised to trend higher throughout year.

US monetary policy continues to be modestly accommodative with the Fed expected to take a gradual approach toward policy adjustments, in our view. Additional Fed rate hikes and balance sheet reduction efforts signal confidence in the US economy s ability to grow and reflect the goal of achieving a normalized environment after an extended period of extreme accommodation. Global monetary policy continues to be constructive and accommodative.

In the convertible sleeve, sectors that contributed positively to relative performance were materials, transportation and consumer staples. On the other hand, information technology, health care and financials pressured relative performance.

The covered call strategy captured fewer gains than anticipated. The covered calls did provide some short-term capital gains for the portfolio, but with the depressed implied volatilities the magnitude of the premiums faced headwinds.

Industry Classification Standards (GICS) economic sectors delivered positive returns as shares were boosted by strong corporate earnings and enduring optimism on pro-growth reform. Telecommunication services, a top performer during this period last year, fell 4% during the reporting period as industry competition intensified. Energy stocks lagged the benchmark more than any other sector and posted a return of -8%. High inventory levels contributed to concerns that crude oil supply continues to exceed demand and the oil math tug of war continued throughout the reporting period. Health care stocks bested all sectors while utilities and consumer staples followed as both sectors rose comparably.

The equity portion of the Fund performed largely in line with the benchmark over the reporting period. In terms of relative performance, positive stock selection counterbalanced negative sector allocation. The Fund s holdings in the health care, industrials and materials sectors were the most beneficial and drove overall positive selection. Conversely, negative selection in the information technology, utilities and energy sectors detracted.

From a sector allocation perspective, an underweight to the financial and health care sectors resulted in the largest positive impact on the Fund s performance. However, the Fund s overweight in energy and underweight in consumer staples detracted from results.

During the reporting period, the equity portion of the Fund s largest overweights relative to the Russell 1000 Value Index were in the energy and materials sectors. The Fund s largest relative underweights were in bond-proxy sectors, including consumer staples and real estate.

In the convertibles sleeve, sector allocations that helped relative performance in the period were materials, consumer staples and transportation. In contrast, energy, health care and telecommunications exposure weighed on relative returns.

In the equity options sleeve, retaining call premium was difficult to start the period, but improved as equity markets slowed from their rapid ascent. Nearly half of the overall gains in the equity market occurred within the first month of the reporting period, led by the health care and technology sectors, which, throughout the reporting period, returned 14.4% and 17.1%, respectively; the consumer discretionary, financial, industrial and utility sectors all contributed high single-digit returns as well. Levels of implied volatility, as measured by the Chicago Board Options Exchange Volatility Index (VIX), dropped to a low of 9.36 in July, the lowest the index has been since 1993 and averaged 11.35 during the period, adversely affecting the strike distances on the call options written. Calls written on the energy and financial sectors aided returns; however the strong performance in equities to start the period resulted in options expiring in-the-money, requiring cash assignments in excess of the premium collected.

Outlook

US equity markets continue to record new all-time highs, volatility is near all-time lows and interest rates are trending higher on an improving economic outlook, in our view. Historically, these factors have been positive indicators for both economic and corporate earnings growth and supportive of investments in risk assets.

Stress in select industries of the market has waned, and overall, we believe balance sheets, leverage ratios and interest-coverage ratios continue to support an investment in the convertible asset class.
