Item 5.02 Departure of Directors or Certain Officers; Election of Directors; Appointment of Certain Officers; Compensatory Arrangements of Certain Officers.

In view of the potential benefits of unifying risk management functions throughout SCBT Financial Corporation (“SCBT” or the “Company”) in order to foster a more integrated approach to risk management, the Board of Directors and management of the Company have established a new executive officer position - Chief Risk Officer (CRO). The position is intended to provide a synchronized focus for proactively managing many of the risks associated with governance activities, internal controls, regulatory relationships, bank analyst activities, allocation of capital, bank investments, contract reviews, risk transfer and other functions. SCBT’s CRO position will exist not only as a protective measure of controlling risk but also as a strategic decision-making mechanism for allocating resources.

Richard C. Mathis, age 56, who has served since May 2000 as the Company’s Executive Vice President and Chief Financial Officer, assumed the new position as Executive Vice President and Chief Risk Officer effective February 16, 2007. SCBT believes that his technical as well as decision-making skills, combined with a comprehensive understanding of SCBT’s businesses and internal activities, make him uniquely qualified for this position.

John C. Pollok, age 41, who has been with SCBT since 1996 in executive positions and has served for the past two years as the Company’s Senior Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer (COO), will continue as COO and has also assumed the duties of Chief Financial Officer effective February 16, 2007. SCBT believes that Mr. Pollok’s intricate knowledge of the Company likewise makes him highly qualified for these roles.
