Spark Networks Highlights Osmium's Failure to Articulate a Substantive Plan in Contrast to Strength of Company's Current Strategy

LOS ANGELES, May 15, 2014 Spark Networks, Inc. (NYSE MKT: LOV) (the Company or Spark), a leader in creating niche-focused brands that build and strengthen the communities they serve, today issued the following letter from the Company's Board of Directors (the Board) to its stockholders demonstrating what it believes to be a stark contrast between its Board's well-articulated, three-part strategy for driving stockholder value that is already delivering results, and the inability of Osmium Partners, LLC (Osmium) to provide any discernible plan.

The letter to stockholders follows:

To Our Stockholders:

As our annual meeting approaches, you have an important decision to make that will have an enormous impact on the value of your investment in Spark Networks, Inc. You are being asked to choose between your incumbent Board, which is executing a consistently articulated and successful plan to drive growth and maximize profits, and a slate of what we believe are ill-qualified nominees, lacking experience with consumer internet businesses who were hand-picked to represent one self-interested stockholder, Osmium. Led by John Lewis, who has attempted to bully and threaten his way onto the Board and who we do not believe has any relevant operating or board experience, Osmium has repeatedly refused to engage constructively with Spark's Board or management or to articulate any substantive strategy or plan on how it and its nominees intend to run your Company if they were to seize control of your Board. In short, the dissident stockholder and its nominees ask for your vote, but have not offered any discernible go forward strategy or actual business plan. Additionally, Osmium's criticism of the current Board's plan is rife with what we believe to be misinformation and mischaracterizations.

The choice is clear. Your Board has the expertise, proven track record and, most importantly, a clear concrete plan that is already delivering results. Handing control of the Company to Osmium's slate with no discernible strategy or plan would jeopardize a strategy that is working, and we expect would also severely undermine, if not entirely halt, Spark's ability to continue generating attractive stockholder returns.

We encourage you to read these materials carefully and vote the enclosed WHITE proxy card promptly FOR our six director nominees Gregory R. Liberman, Jonathan B. Bulkeley, Benjamin Derhy, David Hughes, Thomas G. Stockham, and Vince Thompson.

Osmium, an activist stockholder, has nominated four directors who, if elected, would constitute a majority of the Board, thereby giving Osmium control of the Company. This would amount to seizing control of your Company without paying you, the stockholders, the premium you and the Company rightfully deserve. Since Osmium wants you to give it control of your Company, it is reasonable to expect that they would have produced a clear, strategic plan to be measured against your Board's plan that has shown great and continually improving success over the past several years. And yet, despite our repeated requests over several months for details on their plan, Osmium has produced nothing of the sort.

During our effort to engage in constructive conversations, Osmium's best effort to provide a strategy was sending excerpts of Match.com's earnings transcript, a Barron's profile of IAC, a Harvard Business Review article and investor presentations for an online travel website.

Osmium started this process by misleading our CEO and, in its subsequent communications with the Board and you, we believe has consistently misled and mischaracterized the facts. Osmium has not focused on any attempt to effect changes in the Company's strategy, but instead seems singularly-focused on seizing control of your Board. Your Board tried in good faith to negotiate with Osmium to avoid this unnecessary proxy contest by agreeing to Osmium's demands on not one but TWO occasions by first agreeing to one, and later two director appointments, only to have Osmium change its mind and reject these efforts without further discussion. To this day, despite having claimed for months that it had a concrete plan to share with the Company, Osmium still has not presented an actual strategic plan for Spark.

STOCKHOLDERS DESERVE A PLAN - OSMIUM OFFERS NO STRATEGIC PLAN AND EVEN DEMONSTRATES

A POOR UNDERSTANDING OF SPARK'S BUSINESS STRATEGY

On March 10th, Osmium issued a lengthy letter to stockholders that purported to present an Action Plan that its directors would undertake if elected and reiterated this supposed plan in its definitive proxy materials filed with the SEC.

We urge you to carefully review the following critically important questions about Osmium's purported plan. We believe you will agree that it asserts no actual business plan or credible strategic direction for the Company, but rather suggests a number of vague, unnecessary research projects and fishing expeditions that would be conducted at stockholders' expense. Consider the following:

- 1) Osmium claims it would review the current strategy and historical current direct marketing investments of Christian Networks.

When our plan to grow the Christian Networks business was first implemented in 2011, we clearly indicated it would require meaningful investment but would deliver long-term stockholder value. Having accomplished our goal of building a core subscriber base, this marketing spend has been slowing since the second-half of 2013. The results are clear ChristianMingle has approximately 600% growth in average paying subscribers to over 180,000, 80% brand awareness in its target market¹ and Spark enjoyed 70% growth in revenue between 2010 and 2013.

Stockholders should ask

How is Osmium qualified to gain control of the Board when it clearly still needs to review what we have been consistently articulating for the past three years?

- 2) Osmium clearly states in its definitive proxy materials that the paid online dating industry is characterized by at-scale competitors. However, in the same paragraph it also says that it would focus on shrink(ing) the business.

Stockholders should ask

¹ Based on a brand awareness study conducted by a third party consumer research company.

Now that Spark has achieved scale in its two core Jewish and Christian markets, how would Osmium enhance stockholder value by shrinking the Company and destroying the hard-earned scale Osmium itself admits is important to success?

- 3) Osmium claims in its definitive proxy materials that it would provide visible metrics to allow investors to judge the degree of the Company's progress. Despite many conversations with management, and several public letters, Osmium has never enunciated to us or you what metrics it would disclose or for that matter, what metrics it would like us to disclose.

Your Board and management are committed to appropriate and helpful disclosure and robust communication with stockholders. We continuously seek to ensure that we are providing material, relevant information that would assist investors in understanding our performance and our prospects. We believe in listening and being responsive to our stockholders and in fact recently began providing some additional metrics due in part to conversations with constructive stockholders who specifically identified information that they thought would be useful to investors. Of course, certain information should not be disclosed for competitive reasons, but the metrics we have provided and those we recently began providing which include direct marketing spend, subscriber growth, average revenue per user (ARPU), average paying subscribers, brand awareness, contribution margin, plan mix and subscriber base composition give the relevant information that investors need to make informed judgments about the Company.

Stockholders should ask

Why can't Osmium name a single metric that we should or it would disclose?

- 4) Osmium also says it would ensure that Spark evaluates all strategic alternatives. Spark's Board routinely evaluates a broad and comprehensive list of ways to maximize stockholder value, including assessing our current competitive position in the marketplace and our prospects for future growth. At this time, we believe strongly that our current strategic plan will deliver greater long-term stockholder value than any other available option. That said, we always have been and will continue to be open to any strategic alternatives that provide maximum value to our stockholders.

In making its case, Osmium's supposed plan deceptively points to what we consider highly misleading figures. For example, Osmium references stockholder return figures that conveniently ignore our recent success by using an extended, non-representative time frame that includes a turn-around period prior to your Board's decision to implement new strategies, install new management, and take critical steps to move the business in a new direction powered by the critically important ChristianMingle brand. In providing its purported view of Spark's value, Osmium buries its math in a footnote. That math leans on Osmium's own estimates and comparisons to two transactions, one of which involves a genealogy website with a markedly different subscriber base far removed from and in our view entirely irrelevant to our core business and customer base - and the other is an international deal from three years ago.

Moreover, Osmium does not suggest anything new that your current Board does not already consider and do when fulfilling our fiduciary duties.

Stockholders should ask

Why is Osmium using a time frame that completely ignores the success of the Company's recent performance based on the strategic plan implemented by the Board and insisting on a process that the current Board routinely considers? Could it be because Osmium is only interested in presenting a one-sided view to get a short-term return at the expense of the long-term value we believe the current strategy will provide to all stockholders?

- 5) Osmium claims in its definitive proxy materials that it would ensure that management will be held accountable by tying compensation to both business results and share performance, and insinuates that management has little skin in the game.

Management's compensation today is clearly and directly aligned with your interests. As an example, in January 2014, Osmium reduced its skin in the game by actively disposing of a net of 247,311 shares of Company stock, which at the time accounted for about 5% of its position. One month earlier, your CEO waived his regular December 15th cash compensation and accepted stock in lieu thereof. In addition, while including stock options in describing management's compensation, Osmium significantly and intentionally downplays the incentive that management has to create value for you by excluding stock options from its purported stock ownership figures. Stock options comprise a meaningful portion of our executives' total compensation. However, Osmium conveniently chooses to either selectively include or exclude equity, based upon its goals in any given situation. If vested options (or those that will vest in 60 days) are included, as is required when calculating beneficial ownership under SEC rules, the aggregate equity ownership of the Board and management is 7.91% and Mr. Liberman's ownership is 3.8% - clearly demonstrating we have plenty of skin in the game.

Stockholders should ask

How can Osmium credibly develop a tangible strategic plan when it can't even decide whether stock options are or are not meaningful to Spark's executive team?

In short, we believe a close examination of Osmium's Action Plan can only lead one to the following conclusion: either Osmium and its nominees are not competent to assume control of this Company, or they have a self-serving agenda that they are hiding from you.

In sharp contrast, your current Board has a clear, well thought out strategy, is overseeing the implementation of a tangible and meaningful plan that is delivering results. Let us summarize that strategy for you and contrast it with Osmium's fishing expedition.

SPARK'S BOARD IS OVERSEEING A DRAMATIC TURN-AROUND AND IMPLEMENTED A PLAN THAT HAS DELIVERED SIGNIFICANT STOCKHOLDER VALUE

First, let's rewind to the period from 2006 to 2010. Spark was in a tough position. The Company faced serious market challenges and declining revenues. Spark's portfolio was primarily driven by JDate, the anchor of its Jewish Networks business. Other brands in Spark's portfolio, such as American Singles, were undifferentiated from competitors and struggling to maintain market share. The Board and management team made the decision to profitably wind-down its American Singles business and build the foundation for future growth. That growth has largely come in the form of ChristianMingle, the Company's now marquee brand and largest revenue driver, which had only $6 million in revenue and averaged 26,000 subscribers during 2010. Recognizing the pressing challenges, the Board took decisive action to implement a plan that it believed would augment and focus the Company's resources, and put in place a new strategy to seize on higher growth opportunities in the adjacent Christian market.

MIDWAY THROUGH A MULTI-PHASE STRATEGIC PLAN THAT HAS ALREADY DELIVERED SUBSTANTIAL REVENUE AND PAID SUBSCRIBER GROWTH

The Company's plan consists of three distinct yet overlapping phases. Since Mr. Liberman's appointment as CEO, the Company has methodically and successfully completed the first phase of this plan and is now moving into phase two, installing the foundation to continue realizing long-term growth in phase three. The three phases are:

- 1) Build Critical Mass and a Brand Significant investment to build a core foundation of paid subscribers and brand awareness through a strategic marketing and relationship-building program designed to target the Christian singles market.

RESULTS ACHIEVED

- i. Approximately 600% growth in average paying subscribers to over 180,000 between 2010 to 2013
- ii. ChristianMingle has achieved brand awareness in its target market of 80%² and nearly the same in the general U.S. population
- iii. Creation of a ChristianMingle Advisory Board consisting of recognized Christian leaders
- iv. Deep, trusted, personal relationships in the Christian community
- v. Development of a church directory that now boasts more than 115,000 churches in the U.S., alone
- vi. A platform that reaches a faith-focused audience of 6 million people per month

- 2) Drive Efficiencies and Profitability Once a meaningful installed base of subscribers was achieved alongside sustainable brand, the primary focus shifted to ensuring the platform operates as efficiently and as profitably as possible.

INITIATIVES IN MOTION

- i. Reallocation of direct marketing spend and optimizing pricing

- ii. Increasing win-back and renewal paying subscriber bases, which do not require incremental acquisition marketing spend

- iii. Improving ARPU

RESULTS ALREADY ACHEIVED

- i. 70% growth in total company revenue from 2010 to 2013 with Christian Networks contributing almost two-thirds of the Company's total revenue
- ii. Three consecutive years of total company revenue growth with a 60% compound annual growth rate since 2010
- iii. Three consecutive quarters of improved contribution for ChristianMingle, including an 83% improvement in Q1 2014

² Based on a brand awareness study conducted by third party consumer research company.

- 3) Leverage Platform for Growth With an established, authentic, trusted foundation in the Christian market, the Company will seek to leverage additional potential revenue streams in the $4+ billion³ Christian media and commerce markets.

CORE BUILDING BLOCKS IN PLACE

- i. The Company has nurtured the seeding of its media businesses, including the Gospel Media Group that engages with the Christian community beyond just singles. In addition to ChristianMingle, this platform currently includes four other sites that have the potential to be meaningful growth drivers in the future, ultimately deriving revenues not only from advertising sales, but also from commerce transactions.

Our strategic plan is clear, achievable and most importantly, already being methodically executed. Our plan has successfully transformed the Company, leveraged Spark's core competencies in creating niche-focused communities and produced meaningful results. Our plan has maintained the success and profitability of JDate.

THE NUMBERS PROVE THAT SPARK'S STRATEGIC PLAN IS DELIVERING SUBSTANTIAL STOCKHOLDER VALUE AND CAN UNLOCK EVEN GREATER VALUE WHEN FULLY EXECUTED

We are only midstream in its full implementation and our three-pronged plan has already delivered substantial returns for you, our stockholders, in the past three years including:

Share price increase of 57.2%, outperforming the Russell 2000 and Russell MicroCap Tech Indices

An 83% growth in market capitalization

A 104% growth in total enterprise value⁴
