ALLERGAN COMMENTS ON INAMED STATEMENT

IRVINE, CA., November 16, 2005 Allergan, Inc. (NYSE: AGN) released the following statement today regarding the announcement made by Inamed Corporation's (NASDAQ: IMDC) Board of Directors that it has determined that Allergan's proposed offer to acquire Inamed is reasonably likely to result in a superior proposal.

Allergan is pleased that Inamed's Board is already evaluating our proposed offer and seems to have recognized that our offer will ultimately prove to be superior, said David E. I. Pyott, Allergan's Chairman of the Board, President and Chief Executive Officer. Allergan's offer is superior because the price is higher, the cash component is greater and the company's stock is a better currency than that of Medicis. We believe that the combination of Allergan and Inamed will create a world leader in medical aesthetics that will bring long-term value to both companies' employees, customers, patients and stockholders. Allergan looks forward to engaging promptly in discussions with Inamed regarding our proposal.
