CryptoLogic enhances customer service and player experience with Interactive Intelligence contact centre support

August 29, 2006 (Toronto, ON) Strengthening the company's blue chip support services for online players, CryptoLogic Inc., a leading software developer to the global Internet gaming industry, has enhanced its customer service system for its 24/7, multi-lingual contact centre provided through its subsidiary, WagerLogic Limited. The innovative Interactive Intelligence system automates routing of requests to the best representative, who can easily manage all interactions with players, via telephone, fax, emails and chat, from a single source platform. The new support system improves player retention through faster, more personal service from customer service representatives with the right skill set in the right language.

CryptoLogic prides itself on delivering the ultimate online experience to its customers – players – and providing superior customer service plays an important role in achieving this goal, said Lewis Rose, CryptoLogic's President and CEO. We've said it time and time again: we're listening to the players and know what they want. Our enhanced contact centre system enables CryptoLogic to provide the smart, customized support and service that players want – quickly and efficiently.

The new system gives customer service representatives an in-depth view of player information in order to provide tailored and personalized service, every time. The technology also offers real-time visibility into current and historical contact centre operations, so staff can be allocated optimally to address issues in priority sequence and to maintain superior service levels regardless of contact volumes.
