Elam appeal - welding rod litigation

The BOC Group plc ("BOC") is disappointed with the decision of the appeal court in Illinois confirming the decision of the trial court in the Elam case tried in Madison County, Illinois in 2003. The BOC Group, Inc. a US subsidiary of BOC - was one of three defendants.

The decision does not change The BOC Group, Inc's position with respect to the Elam case or the manganese litigation generally and the defendants will continue to defend themselves vigorously against what they believe to be meritless claims. The BOC Group, Inc. and the other defendants intend to appeal the Elam decision to the Illinois Supreme Court. That court has discretion to decide whether to accept the appeal.

The Elam verdict was clearly an aberration and of nine manganese cases in which The BOC Group, Inc. has been a defendant, the defence has won eight cases. The overall damages awarded in the Elam verdict was only US$1m and since the verdict in that case in October 2003, there have been two verdicts for the defence, including most recently the Boren trial, which was also heard in Madison County, Illinois. In Boren, decided earlier this month, many of the same experts testified and similar evidence was presented to the jury, which returned a defence verdict in favour of The BOC Group Inc. and the other defendants in a matter of hours.

Since Elam was tried in 2003, there have been a number of scientific studies that indicate no increased risk of Parkinson's disease or related disease among welders. These studies include a study conducted among 27,839 workers in Denmark, including 6,163 welders, which concludes welders are not at increased risk of developing Parkinson's disease or other neurodegenerative disorders, and a study conducted in the United States at three Caterpillar Inc. plants of 12,595 workers, of which 3,430 were welders. This study also found no statistically significant increased risk of disease among welders. Another study is the subject of an article that will soon be published in a leading journal.

Edgar Filing: BOC GROUP PLC - Form 6-K

It studied occupational and medical data in Sweden over a 40 year period and found no correlation between welding occupations and any form of parkinsonism.

At 30 September 2005, there were approximately 8,500 manganese claimants naming The BOC Group, Inc. as a defendant, representing a decrease of approximately 1100 claimants from the prior year. Approximately 4,600 claimants are in the federal multi-district litigation proceeding. Plaintiffs have asked the court to withdraw the first two cases which were scheduled to be tried in the multi district proceeding in 2006 - the Morgan and Landry trials. The defendants, including The BOC Group, Inc., have filed a motion for sanctions as a consequence. This motion is claiming fees, costs and expenses incurred by the defendants in connection with those cases and is also requesting that claims based on diagnosis from a particular physician, Dr. Paul Nausieda are dismissed unless a second diagnosis from an independent physician is provided.
