Note: Only full-year projections are disclosed for non-consolidated business results.

3. Reasons for the Revision

In the first half period, demand for construction and mining equipment has been growing more than projected in Asia and Latin America. Furthermore, demand in North America and Japan has been improving over the corresponding period a year ago. In this light, we have revised the projections of April 27, 2010 upward for both consolidated sales and profits for the first half period. In the second half, we are anticipating that we should be able to absorb any negative factors of the Japanese yen's appreciation by capitalizing on steady demand and improving productivity. In this regard, we are not revising the projections of April 27, 2010 for the second half period. As preconditions for our current projections, we are assuming the foreign exchange rates in and after the second quarter will be as follows: USD 1 = JYP 88, EUR 1 = JPY 110, and RMB 1 = JPY13.

Cautionary Statement

The announcement set forth herein contains forward-looking statements which reflect management's current views with respect to certain future events, including expected financial position, operating results, and business strategies. These statements can be identified by the use of terms such as will, believes, should, projects and similar terms and expressions that identify future events or expectations. Factors that may cause actual results to differ materially from those predicted by such forward-looking statements include, but are not limited to, unanticipated changes in demand for the Company's principal products, owing to changes in the economic conditions in the Company's principal markets; changes in exchange rates or the impact of increased competition; unanticipated cost or delays encountered in achieving the Company's objectives with respect to globalized product sourcing and new Information Technology tools; uncertainties as to the results of the Company's research and development efforts and its ability to access and protect certain intellectual property rights; and, the impact of regulatory changes and accounting principles and practices.
