(a) Please see Item 2.02 above.

(b) Oracle is issuing the following statement today:

Oracle's current financial strategy is to add a modest amount of longer-term leverage to the capital structure. Term debt is commensurate with our financial profile. Moreover, relative to our $67 billion market cap, we believe that debt on the order of 10% of our market cap represents a conservative approach. The increase in leverage will help lower our weighted average cost of capital and drive an increased return on equity.

We remain committed to maintaining a conservative balance sheet and to preserving our credit profile. We are targeting a debt to EBITDA multiple of approximately 1.0x – 1.25x EBITDA in the intermediate period.

In addition, we plan to maintain a sizeable cash position and are targeting a net positive cash balance. We do not plan to have a cash balance of less than $3 billion to $4 billion.

We expect to finance share repurchases with ongoing free cash flow, and we expect that the volume of share repurchase will be related to the level of free cash flow generation in each quarter.

In connection with the foregoing statement, please see Exhibit 99.1 furnished herewith.
