PART III NARRATIVE

State below in reasonable detail why Forms 10-K, 20-F, 11-K, 10-Q, 10-D, N-SAR, N-CSR, or the transition report or portion thereof, could not be filed within the prescribed time period.

Healthcare Realty Trust Incorporated (the Company) hereby requests an extension of time to file its Annual Report on Form 10-K for the period ended December 31, 2004. The extension is needed to allow the Company and its predecessor auditor sufficient time to evaluate and assess certain matters raised by the Company's current auditor, KPMG LLP, related to the accounting treatment of two items in the Company's 2004 and prior years' financial statements. KPMG LLP did not take a position on these matters until March 10, 2005, although the present accounting treatment of the two items has been consistently applied since these matters originated and over the ensuing years, including 2004.

The first item relates to the accounting for one category of development costs. The Company is analyzing the impact, by accounting period, of adjusting the accounting related to the category of development cost, including the impact on other accounts, to determine if differences are material to any accounting period and whether any adjustments to prior year financial statements are appropriate.

The second item relates to the method by which the Company has accounted for the amounts receivable from one former operator over a period of several years. The current auditor has asserted that SFAS 114 requires that only the contractual obligor may be considered in assessing the collectibility of the receivable, not a successor obligor. Accordingly the Company is examining the facts and circumstances for the applicable accounting periods to determine whether, and to what extent, the accounting would have been different, if sources other than the contractual obligor are not considered. The Company fully expects the account at issue to be paid by a party other than the original obligor.

The Company does not believe that the adjustments, which could result in a restatement of prior year financial statements, will have a material impact on the financial statements for any year, including 2004. However, the disposition of these matters will not conclude until the Company and its predecessor auditor have completed their evaluations. To date, the Company has not identified any material weaknesses in its internal controls over financial reporting.

If answer is no, identify report(s).

Yes       No

If so: attach an explanation of the anticipated change, both narratively and quantitatively, and, if appropriate, state the reasons why a reasonable estimate of the results cannot be made.

The Company began its analysis of these matters immediately upon learning of them and is working to complete its review of these matters and to quantify the impact of any adjustments to the prior periods, and to assess the materiality thereof. The Company is not in a position to state the outcome at this time. Preliminary analyses indicate that the amounts involved will not be material to any prior year, but if not adjusted in the prior years, the cumulative effect could be material to the current year.
