This Amendment No.4 to Schedule 13D (this “Amendment”) amends the below-indicated items from the Schedule 13D with respect to the shares of common stock (the “Common Stock”) of Rosetta Stone Inc., (“RST” or the “Company”) previously filed by or on behalf of the Reporting Persons (as defined below), as previously amended (collectively, the “Schedule 13D”), by supplementing such Items with the information below.

The names of the persons filing this Amendment (collectively, the “Reporting Persons”) are: The D3 Family Fund, L.P. (the “Family Fund”), The D3 Family Bulldog Fund, L.P. (the “Bulldog Fund”), The DIII Offshore Fund, L.P. (the “Offshore Fund”), Nierenberg Investment Management Company, Inc. (“NIMCO”), Nierenberg Investment Management Offshore, Inc. (“NIMO”) and David Nierenberg (“Mr. Nierenberg”).

Item 4. Purpose of Transaction

Item 4 is hereby amended to add the following:

We have interacted with Rosetta’s board of directors and senior managers on numerous occasions during the more than three years that we have been shareholders. We have advocated changes in corporate strategy and cost, executive leadership, and board composition. We own more than 1.5M shares and believe that we are Rosetta’s third largest shareholder. During the past month Rosetta’s board began considering inviting me to become a director. They appointed me to the board effective April 15.

At this moment, not yet participating in any Rosetta board or board committee meetings, having seen no internal documents, nor discussing any material, non-public information, all the information I have about Rosetta is already in the public domain. Today may be my last chance to speak freely for some time. Therefore I would like to use this opportunity to explain why I decided to join the board and set forth what I plan to do as a director.

Let’s begin with a caveat learned from three decades of board service: until one gets inside the tent, one really cannot know what the facts are and what the situation is. There is much that I do not know and probably some that I think I know which may turn out to be mistaken. Nevertheless, I believe that Rosetta has attractive attributes to build on, creating the potential for significant value creation:

• Rosetta Stone is a valuable, globally recognized brand name and the company has a substantial customer base.

• The company has a solid balance sheet, with almost $3 of net cash per share as of December 31, 2014. Having 35% of the market cap in cash should be a solid margin of safety.

• The company has a capable board of directors, especially as it has been enhanced by the recent additions of John Hass, Caroline Tsay, and Steven Yankovich. These additions help the board address the company’s future direction.

• The company has a profitable, cash generating “serious learner” consumer language business.

• The company has two institutional businesses which have the potential to become attractive growth vehicles. Of particular interest to me personally, as a community servant and philanthropist in education, from pre-school children through college, is the tremendous promise which Lexia Learning has demonstrated in teaching elementary school students how to read. School spending is the largest spending by state governments and literacy is the gateway to economic mobility.

Because so much is spent for education, and because of education's huge impact on individual mobility, corporate success, and national competitiveness, the private and public equity markets have a strong interest in education-related businesses, particularly those which deploy relevant mobile telecommunications and cloud technology to deliver software as a service (SAAS). This week, for example, LinkedIn announced that it would acquire learning company Lynda.com for ten times revenue. While Rosetta is still evolving, it is notable that the company generated more than 60% of its revenues DIGITALLY in the most recent quarter – yet the stock trades at a disappointing enterprise value to sales multiple of only 0.4x at a time when successful public SAAS companies are valued at 2-4x or higher.

For all of these reasons, we believe that Rosetta Stone presents an opportunity for investors to multiply the value of their stakes in the company over time. It is too early for me to know – not being inside yet – exactly what actions could increase value, whether, for example, it could happen with Rosetta remaining an independent company, or whether parts of it might be separated and sold. To us right now, no option can be off the table. I have a fiduciary obligation to do what is best for the shareholders.

Here is what I hope to accomplish, as one member of a nine person board:

As we have emphasized in our prior 13D's, we believe that success hinges on having a corporate focus which is RIGHT and TIGHT. We believe that Rosetta has been doing far too much. We believe that inadequate focus caused poor allocation of financial and human capital and that it also caused inconsistent, often poor, execution. Rosetta recently began sharpening its focus, and we applaud those positive steps. We want to help accelerate and complete that process, so that Rosetta will become a simpler company, doing less, but executing better, allocating resources shrewdly and building value, rather than destroying it.

The board must find and engage the right permanent CEO to lead the execution of the company's new strategy successfully. Articulating the strategy and hiring the CEO to execute it are the two most important decisions a board makes. We must make them right.

The board "sets the tone at the top." I am certain that Rosetta colleagues are troubled that they do not know where the company is going or what their role in it may be. We have a duty to treat Rosetta colleagues the right way: to be truthful and compassionate, to listen, to encourage dialogue and feedback, to treat people with dignity. When spending and cost reduction are required, the board should demonstrate its commitment to intelligently reducing all governance-related costs and spending within its control. We are all in this together.

We believe that substantial spending and cost reduction is necessary. The sooner this is completed the less uncertainty and anxiety will linger. Spending and cost are too high for two reasons. First, because the company's strategy was much too diffuse, it spent too much on too many things in too many places. Second, because Rosetta was very successful until about five years ago, and because it aspired to grow much larger, we believe that it created a cost structure and a spending culture of a much larger company, one which is no longer realistic. We don't care how large the company is. What we care about instead, is how profitable it is, how much cash it generates, how rapidly it grows, how intelligently it allocates capital, and how it builds human capital. If first Rosetta needs to get smaller, in order to then get bigger and better, that's perfectly fine.

As a large shareholder with skin in the game we want to heighten the sense of urgency about doing these things right and doing them quickly. The faster we move RIGHT and TIGHT, grounded on analytical INSIGHT, the happier our stakeholders will be.
