About our Community Banking Culture.

From a single branch office on the Evansville, Ind., riverbank, Old National has grown into a strong, successful regional bank with approximately 2,800 associates and nearly 170 banking centers. Yet one important thing has not changed in our 180-year history: we remain, at our core, a true community bank.

Community banking is woven into the fabric and culture of Old National. It serves as the cornerstone of our identity and defines our mission and vision as a financial institution. To us, community banking means supporting local families and businesses while constantly striving to improve the client experience. It also means investing in our communities and empowering our associates to do the same.

Committed to community engagement

As a past recipient of the prestigious Points of Light Corporate Engagement Award for Excellence, Old National has a long-standing tradition of being actively engaged in the communities we serve.

In 2013 alone, Old National funded more than $3.2 million in grants and sponsorships, and our associates donated more than 94,000 total volunteer hours in support of more than 2,000 organizations. This commitment to service led VolunteerMatch, an organization that assists companies in engaging their employees in volunteer activities, to recognize Old National as the Employee Volunteer Program of the Year for 2012 and 2013.

Naturally, having a culture that embraces and empowers community engagement requires an organizational commitment to helping associates achieve an effective work/life balance. In 2013, Old National earned the Work-Life Seal of Distinction from WorldatWork's Alliance for Work-Life Progress, a recognition that celebrates employers who demonstrate leadership in helping employees achieve success at work and in their personal lives.

Recognized as a leader in ethics and risk management

In 2009, Old National became the first bank in the nation to have its corporate culture certified by Ethisphere, an independent firm that examines a company's organizational health and culture, ethics and compliance programs, and corporate governance systems. Not only has Old National maintained this certification every year since, in 2012 we became the first and only U.S. bank to be named to the prestigious World's Most Ethical Companies list by Ethisphere. And once again in 2013 and 2014, we were the only U.S. financial institution to receive World's Most Ethical status. This is a strong validation of our focus on maintaining the highest standards when serving our clients, communities and shareholders.

Equally noteworthy is our corporate ISS QuickScore, which measures a company's adherence to corporate governance standards. Old National is one of just a handful of banks to have earned a score of 2 on a scale of 1 to 10, with a 1 being the best possible score. This not only reflects our desire to be a world leader in transparency and business ethics, it underscores our unwavering commitment to risk management, which is at the center of our strategic imperatives.

Proud to be a basic community bank

While some might characterize the Old National community banking culture as old fashioned or even a bit boring, we respectfully disagree. To us, it is a simple yet powerful way of doing business that provides us with a strong platform for consistent quality performance. We believe this approach will continue to strengthen our organization and provide benefits for our shareholders, clients and communities today and well into the future.
