AngloGold Ashanti welcomes Anglo American's intention to reduce its shareholding, while remaining a significant shareholder in AngloGold Ashanti

JOHANNESBURG --- 26 October 2005 --- AngloGold Ashanti welcomes the announcement by Anglo American, namely that it intends to provide AngloGold Ashanti with greater flexibility to pursue its strategy by deciding to reduce its shareholding in the company, whilst still intending to remain a significant shareholder in the medium term.

AngloGold Ashanti was formed in 1998 through the consolidation of Anglo American's gold interests, at the time held through eight separately listed South African companies. AngloGold Ashanti started from an almost exclusively South African production base and has been transformed through a range of asset acquiring transactions, the most recent of which was its merger with Ashanti Goldfields.

AngloGold Ashanti is now a leading diversified gold major currently operating 20 gold mines in ten countries.

Since 1998, in the context of AngloGold Ashanti's acquisition strategy, Anglo American has had to buy shares in the market, in order to keep its equity stake in AngloGold Ashanti at above the 50% level and thereby maintain AngloGold Ashanti as a subsidiary. AngloGold Ashanti understands that there are two related issues underlying Anglo American's intention to reduce its holding in AngloGold Ashanti.

First, AngloGold Ashanti is focused on a strategy that aims to maintain and if possible increase the company's share of profitable gold ounces, in light of current and prospective market conditions.

Furthermore, given the nature of the gold mining industry, corporate transactions and acquisitions of assets typically use the currency of shares rather than cash. To maintain its investment at the level of a subsidiary (i.e. above 50%) Anglo American would have had to increase its level of investment at each time such a transaction takes place.

Secondly, the market values gold mining companies and diversified mining companies very differently.

One implication of this is the ongoing possibility that the value of Anglo American's holding in AngloGold Ashanti is not fully reflected in Anglo American's own valuation and share price. As the size of Anglo American's investment in AngloGold Ashanti increases, so does the extent of this potential value discrepancy.

Commenting on Anglo American's announcement, CEO Bobby Godsell said "I am delighted that Anglo American is supportive of our strategy and will remain a significant shareholder in the medium term.

We will now enjoy greater trading liquidity, as a consequence of their intention to dilute or be diluted, which is very important for us as a leading global gold company."

The CEO of AngloGold Ashanti will discuss today's announcement in a conference call with the media and market to be held today, Wednesday, 26 October 2005, at 17:30 pm (GMT +02:00; 11:30 EDT). In the same call the AngloGold Ashanti management team will discuss the company's third quarter results, which will be released to the market prior to the call. This call will replace the earnings calls originally scheduled for Thursday, 27 October 2005.
