Item 7.01 Regulation FD Disclosure.

On October 9, 2017, Soligenix, Inc. (the “Company”) made a previously announced presentation regarding the dusquetide (SGX94) technology platform and its potential anti-inflammatory, tissue healing, anti-infective and anti-tumor action, including data from the recently completed Phase 2 trial in oral mucositis, at the 2nd World Congress and Expo on Immunology. During the presentation, Dr. Oreola Donini, the Company’s Chief Scientific Officer, discussed the potential role for innate immune modulation in oncology as well as in tissue healing, inflammation and infection, specifically with respect to the role of p62/sequestosome-1 in the tumor cell itself as well as in the tumor microenvironment. Dr. Donini further noted that data from a preclinical study of SGX94 and the Phase 2 clinical trial of SGX942 for the treatment of oral mucositis in head and neck cancer patients may support the proposition of a potential role for innate immune modulation in the oncology space with respect to tumor resolution. An audio archive of the presentation is available on the Company’s website at www.soligenix.com/investors.
