Item 8.01 Other Events.

On June 12, 2007, Cabot Corporation ("Cabot") agreed to settle the federal class action lawsuits pending against it alleging that Cabot and other carbon black manufacturers had violated antitrust laws in setting prices for carbon black sold in the United States. Cabot's share of the settlement cost is $10 million. Cabot denies any wrongdoing of any kind in these cases, and strongly believes that it has good defenses to these claims. Nonetheless, Cabot agreed to the settlement to avoid further expense, inconvenience, risk and the distraction of burdensome and protracted litigation. The settlement agreement is subject to court approval.

Cabot will continue to vigorously defend the remaining antitrust lawsuits pending against it. There are suits pending in several state courts brought by purported classes of indirect purchasers of carbon black, and a single federal case brought by a party that did not join the federal class action.

More information regarding this litigation can be found in Cabot's Form 10-K for the fiscal year ended September 30, 2006 and Cabot's Form 10-Q for the quarter ended March 31, 2007.
