ICAHN CALLS FOR FULL DISCLOSURE AS SHAREHOLDERS NEED TO KNOW THE FACTS

Carl Icahn released the following statement regarding Time Warner today:

Steve Case's opinion-editorial in the Washington Post this past Sunday provides an insider's view into the fundamental changes needed at Time Warner. In concept, we agree with Mr. Case's conclusion that after four years of failed attempts to integrate Time Warner's various businesses, it is now time to liberate them so that each can have its own strategy, stock, balance sheet, management team and board.

We are not surprised that someone with a front row seat to the debacle at Time Warner during the Parsons years and a large personal equity stake reached the same conclusion that we have - a major restructuring of Time Warner is necessary to maximize shareholder value.

However, we are shocked that Time Warner's shareholders have had to rely on the Washington Post, well after the fact, to learn that a member of the Time Warner Board proposed to the Board that value would be enhanced by splitting the company into four separate entities. Investors need to understand what level of debate actually occurred at the Board, what type of analysis was conducted and who was responsible for this analysis, all of which go to the heart of shareholder accountability.

In light of this we demand full disclosure of the following information:

- o Board minutes and Board presentations regarding separating Time Warner's businesses.
- o The names of advisors and consultants and the work they have performed on this issue.

Edgar Filing: TIME WARNER INC - Form DFAN14A

Sunlight must be shed on the Board's deliberations and a full account of the details of any studies conducted should be made immediately available to investors. Similarly, the lack of integration and vision at Time Warner, highlighted among other factors by the AOL division's sub par performance and missed opportunities since its acquisition, as further articulated by Mr. Case, is of critical concern to shareholders and must be addressed through full disclosure.

We believe that shareholders need full disclosure and facts regarding the company, not more spin from Time Warner's PR machine about what a "good job" management has done while the Board secretly dismisses proposals to increase shareholder value and a former director and large shareholder of Time Warner states it is "time for change." We also believe that details on the exact number of PR personnel at Time Warner and its subsidiaries and the amount spent on outside PR firms should be disclosed to shareholders, who after all bear the cost of the custom-built PR machine behind which the Board and Mr. Parsons hide. Investors are entitled to know these facts so that a full and open debate regarding the merits of splitting up these businesses, which Mr. Case has now publicly endorsed, can be had.
