If so: attach an explanation of the anticipated change, both narratively and quantitatively, and, if appropriate, state the reasons why a reasonable estimate of the results cannot be made.

In the second quarter of 2003, JCP&L incurred a loss on common stock of $43.2 million as compared to net income of $56.9 million in the second quarter of 2002, as a result of non-cash charges aggregating $158.5 million ($94 million after tax) due to a rate case decision disallowing certain costs from recovery.
