Customers Bank hopes to have an IPO this year; new funding will assist with MBA plans, CEO says.*

Customers Bank, the Phoenixville, Pennsylvania-based commercial and retail bank, expects to go public by the end of this year, said CEO Jay Sidhu.

“We filed our final amendments to our S1 about two weeks ago, so we hope to have the IPO by the end of the year,” said Sidhu who was formerly chairman of Sovereign Bancorp. “We are thinking that after the summer, when the markets are likely to settle down, could be the right time.” he added. Customers Bank, which now has assets of more than USD 1.6bn, was founded in 2009 when Sidhu acquired a controlling stake in New Century Bank which then had about USD 250m in assets.

Customers Bank has been working with investment banks Macquarie Capital and Keefe, Bruyette & Woods, and will likely work with these banks on the IPO, Sidhu said, noting that he has worked with John Duffy, Chairman of Keefe, Bruyette, for many years.

“We don’t need to raise capital but we are going public to have “public currency” and to execute our M&A plans,” Sidhu said. Acquisitions are a major part of Customers’ growth strategy, and the company is very interested in banks in the Mid-Atlantic region including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Northern Virginia.

It would be tough for Customers to make an acquisition over USD 2bn, so acquisition targets are most likely to be in the hundreds of millions, said Warren Taylor, President of Community Banking at Customers Bank.

Customers has acquired two FDIC banks and will consider other FDIC deals, but would now prefer “open bank deals” with banks that are not “very distressed,” Sidhu said. The company would like to provide a 15% average compound return for its shareholders so any acquisition target needs to be evaluated based on this metric.

Customers Bank acquired Port Chester, New York-based USA Bank and Cherry Hill, New Jersey-based ISN Bank in 2010. Customers Bank is also close to completing the deal to acquire Reading, Pennsylvania-based Berkshire Bank, which has about USD 150m in assets and 5 branches. Customers currently has 11 branches including five de novo branches.

The company’s growth strategy is to focus on excellent customer service and be “high tech and high touch banking,” Taylor said. This week, the company announced its new policy that its customers can use any ATM in the US without incurring any fees. This “customer-focused” strategy is proving to be very successful, Taylor added and he noted that Customers was just ranked fourth in the US out of 3,077 banks (with USD 100m to USD 3bn in assets) in the ABA Banking Journal’s performance rankings while in 2009 it ranked near the bottom of #3002.
